

Day 3

Today started off with a long drive to Soller with Maria and Captain Clive where we met Captain Pete from Bonnie Lass, who showed us around and we saw a few of his fantastic boats that he has bought to help NGO's where they do research on species and see if they are endangered or not and also collect ghost nets and learnt a lot more about the different work that the boats does.

Then we met Alice from L'Ondine project who gave us a talk about marine conservation. She emphasised how important people should actually think of how the waste that they dump anywhere can end up destroying habitats of millions of animals and even their lives!

Thapelo learnt a lesson today because he didn't know that all the ear buds that he was dumping in the toilet were ending up on the beach so he vowed to inform. She carried on telling us of the amazing job that they do trying to do damage control and she elaborated more on the 4 R's which are Refuse, Reduce, Re-use, Recycle.

We then saw the different products that they are making out of other materials that are normally plastic like stainless steel straws or bamboo toothbrushes.

We later went to Deckers where we saw all the different clothes that they make for crew on super yachts, the machinery they use to make alterations and where the clothes go when the clients do not want them.

We took a short but very steep walk to the Bellver Castle with Terry although we were not so keen on going since it looks so far and so up high in but it really was worth the time and the effort.

Later on we headed for a pizza night tradition, thanks to Law, and we went to the best pizza restaurant on the island.
